SUBWAY VENTILATION BY STREET GRATINGS BAD, DECLARES MARKS

Borough President Condemns System in Letter to Public Service Commission.

Borough President Marcus M. Marks has written the Public Service Commission condemning the system Through the efforts of Mrs. Martin of subway ventilation by sidewalk gratings. He says:

"My attention has been called to grane of Lynn, Mass., and others, hearings before you concerning the Frederick Savage, inventor, has won advisability of installing ventilating his long fight for release from the gratings in sidewalk areas, particularly upon Broadway. In this connection I beg leave to record my opposition to the installation of such

"First-The gratings are a distinct detriment to traffic, statistice showing that a large proportion of the people who would normally use the sidewalk space which is occupied by a grating make deliberate efforts to use the remainder of the sidewalk, so that the traffic over the grating is often less than half of what would be the normal amount carried by the sidewalk without a grating. The remainder of the sidewalk space is thereby correspondingly congested.

"Second-in frosty weather the gratings are much more slippery than is any sidewalk surface normally laid.

"Third-The presence of these gratings has cost the city tens of thousands of dollars when traffic thousands of dollars when traffic requirements dictated a change in the width of roadway with corresponding alteration in side-walk. Had the gratings not been there, in addition to money saved, delays in the reconstruction and much annoyance would have been obviated.

"At the present time the widening of Likington Avenue has been deliberately stopped for the time being above Fifty-third Street, because north of that district subway gratings exist which would cost a matter of approximately $80,000 to rebuild. My engineers state that it is entirely possible to arrange other and equally tion.
